Important among the changes is a clause to prevent persons who enter politics as candidates from serving as delegates.

The measure was vigorously fought by many delegates who claim that the union should take up political questions.

A dispute arrose over the May Day celebration because it was reported that the park in South St. Louis selected for the entertainment used a coffee urn made by a nonunion firm. A committee was finally appointed to request the management of the park to remove the urn. If the request is perfused, other plans will be made. Many new unions were reported organized by David Kreyling, the secretary.

TWO ARE BURNED TO DEATH. Five Others Injured in Blazing Home at Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 12—Nathan Morris, an attorney, and Frank Haas, the 12-year-old son of Doctor Joseph Haas, to-day were burned to death, and Mrs. Joseph Hass, Miss Belle Haas, Miss Rose Haas, Louis Hass and Grace Lemon, a governess, were injured by fire that almost destroyed the house of Doctor Joseph Haas.

The fire started from the furnace. The family was asteep on the second floor. Mr. Morris was a brother of Mrs. Hans.

From the position of his charred body when found, it was evident that he was endeavoring to get the family out of the house when overcome by smoke and flames. The body of Frank Hass and the unconscious governess were found on the back stairs.

Louis Haas broke his leg by jumping from a second-story window.

Mr. Morris was sentor member of the commercial law firm of Morris & Newburger. He was born in California in 1857, and has practiced in Indianapolis since 1877.

RELIEF FOR NATION'S OVERWORKED SERVANTS

Congressman Sibley Says President and Speaker of House Attempt Entirely Too Much.

SOME ABSURD CONDITIONS.

Believes They May Escape From Many of Their Operous Duties Without Suffering Any Loss of Power or Importance.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL

Washington, April 12.—"Uncle Joe" Sid-ley of Pennsylvania has some original ideas on the distribution of patronage which he believes, if followed, would relieve two of the greatest officers in the United States of their onerous burdens without depriv-ing them of a jot or tittle of their importance or power-the offices being those of President of the United States and Speak-President of the United States and Speaker of the House of Representatives.

"The presidency of the United States," said Mr. Sibley to-day, "should be shorn of one of its terrors—that hyra-headed dragon, the effice-seeker. Who would approach the president of a large railroad corporation with an application for the post of station master or trainmaster or section foreman or conductor, or any other similar matter? And yet that is what occurs every day with the President of the United States.

"I do not think that a remedy for this will be inaugurated during his first term, but in the second term of some President it will come some day that the President will no longer permit himself to be annoyed with applications for offices, but will turn all such business over to the heads of departments, where, in my opinion, it property belongs.

turn all such business over to the heads of departments, where, in my opinion, it properly belongs.

"And it may come in the first term of some President, for I believe that such a system would secure the appointment of the most capable men available, for each person charged with the duty of making appointments would make it a point of pride to have all his appointments of a first-class character, and the administration would thus be stronger than otherwise would be the case, and the President could properly ask an indorsement of the people through the medium of a re-election."

Sibley, "concerning the arduous duties of the Speaker of the House, and yet the fact that these duties are so burdensome is largely the fault of the Speaker. When Mr.
Henderson was Speaker, be considered it his duty to personally examine every bill with the exception of the appropriation bills and other privileged bills which came before the House as though he would be held personally responsible for all private legislation enacted by that body.
"Consequentiv, there were many heartburnings and many harsh words used in connection with his course, which was denounced as tyrannical in the extreme.
"I suggest that, if the Speaker wishes to avoid blacing himself in a position where he will be regarded as a czar, he should select a steering committee of from ten to fifteen of the most prominent members of his party, who would pass upon the bills

ARMY OFFICERS INDIGNANT.

When Major General Was Turned Down Indorsement of President Roosevelt Was Repudiated.

The Republic Bureau, 14th St. and Pennsylvania Ave Washington, April 12.-When personal nemies of Major General H. C. Corbin last Monday defeated his efforts to gain membership in the Metropolitan Club they turned down the indorsement of the President of the United States, as well as that dent of the United States, as well as that of Secretary Root, Major General Young and other prominent army officers.

The fact that President Roosevelt unsuccessfully cast his influence in favor of General Corbin is an evidence of the acrimony of the controversy. While the indignation of General Corbin's friends is still intense, it is now regarded as certain that there will be no en masse retirement from the club membership of the army contingent. The Corbin incident, however, promises to be far-reaching in its effect, for the friends of General Corbin are forping their lines to wrest the control of the board of governors from the hands of those who were so influenced against General Corbin that they forced the withdrawal of his name.

Secretary Root will be the leader in this movement and he probably will be supported by Secretary Mootly and the remainder of the members of the Cabinet who are members of the Metropolitan Club.

It is not expected that President Roosevelt will relish the treatment of the Adjutant General of the army contingent regards the refusal to admit General Corbin as a reflection on the service.

There is much criticism in the Metropolitan Club against the Board of Governors for paying any attention to the "roundrobin" containing the names of forty-six members of the club protesting against favorable action on General Corbin's name. many nerve-thrilling feats on horseback performed by this strange, wild figure from the plains. Clad in the regulation and picturesque cowboy attire, with long coal-black locks, raven mustache, and astride of two jet-black horses, this phenomenon of the frontier defies the laws of gravitation by masterful control of his wiry horses. It is an easy task for him to stand erect on the two horses, without saddle or other equipment, send them flying toward high solid hurdles and easily maintain his foot-hold as the two animals skim over the wooden barriers.

Then two horsemen tear around the arena, and there, resting lightly with a foot on each shoulder, is "the Demon Rider."

Again, a horse dashes madly past—a leap, and on his back is the mysterious stranger. Then a half-somersault, and with no support, the marvel is seen standing erect on his head.

Acrobatic exercises on a fast ralleping horse are apparently easy for him, while equally wonderful use is made of a halfed whip fifteen feet in length. As before, guiding his horse into high wheed, the long lash, shruous as a snake, darts out and cuts into fragments a paper held between the teeth of another rapidly riding horseman.

around the Lindell pavillon loop at the rate of one every half minute.

A large majority of the visitors returning to the city board cars at this point. The crowds, according to the estimate of the Transit Company official, approximated 25,000. This estimate includes only those persons who were hauled to and from the grounds on street cars. In addition many went in carriage and on foot.

It was not found necessary to use either of the new loops, as there were no block-ades of any kind, and all the traffic was handled around the Lindell curve. The new loops will be worked in handling crowds during the days of the dedication. They are situate one on the east and the other on the west side of De Baliviere avenue, directly north of the Wabash tracks.

By means of these loops it will be possible to handle rapidly streams of cars coming out on the Delmar trunk and over De Baliviere avenue, and the cars arriving over De Giverville sysnus. On these two lines are concentrated cars which will run directly to the site from many parts of the city.

For the most part visitors to the site yesterday left the cars at De Baliviere avenue and the Catlin tract. From there they headed in an apparently endless procession toward the River des Peres roadway. On reaching this they scattered to all parts of the grounds.

WORK ADVANCES.

Points which attracted special interest were the cascades, the educational building and the Liberal Arts building. There was much speculation as to whether or not this latter structure will be in shape for the dedication ceremonies.

It is possible to note great advancement in the work upon it, even within a very few days. Rapid progress is being made with the staff work, and the interior is being cleared gradually, as though for action.

A large force of Jefferson Guards and mounted policemen patrolled the grounds throughout the day. There was little for the constabulary to do, however, except answer questions and enforce the regulations against smoking. A few enthusiasts with cameras had to be admonished that no photographing was allowed on the grounds without permit.

The fence around the site is completed, except for a short space fronting on De Baliviere avenue and the Catlin tract. This section can be built within a few hours when the Fair Company is ready to have it done. Yesterday all the gates were open, and the public were allowed to xo and come at will. Several of the buildings were open for inspection.
